You get what you gotta get.

You get what you gotta get.

Every bite feels like a reward after days of holding back. You enjoy it without thinking much because, for a moment, you feel like you deserve it.

EATING

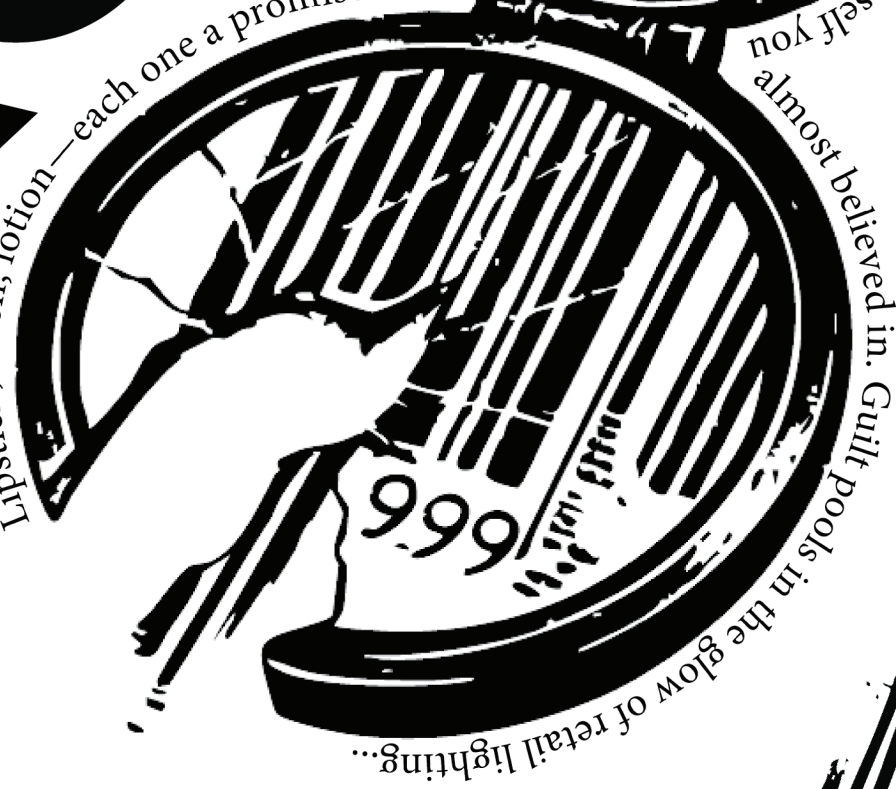

Later, you wonder if it was worth it. You add up the calories, the cost, and the guilt. The meal feels heavier in your stomach and your mind. You crumple the receipt but the guilt sticks around.

OUT

The barcodes you were sold a little piece of joy, and you bought it without thinking. And it felt almost worth it. It priced the feeling. You didn't just price the food, it priced the feeling.
