

There have been carelessly dumped latex gloves all around in the streets of Brussels. They look strangely intimate yet forlorn, reminding you of the unrequested handshakes of strangers who do not really care for you at all.

This kind of encounter one could well do without.

Presented here: Arrival Room (Germany), Social Distancing Art Festival (SODA) 2020