Hobbitological Logic

First, we will cover the three main logical axioms of Hobbitology. They are as follows:

1. Hobbit isn't real.
 2. Hobbits aren't human.
 3. Anything that isn't a human is subhuman².
- Conclusion: Therefore, Hobbits are subhuman.

Premise one states the fact that Hobbits are in fact, not real. As you may recall from the Introduction to Hobbitology, Hobbits were invented by Peter Jackson in his Hobbin' Tales series of books³. Thus, they are entirely fictional.

Premise 2 states the obvious: Hobbits are not human. This is because premise 1 is true by virtue of Hobbits being fictional creatures. The implicit statement in premise 2 is that Hobbits are fictional. But, within The Hobbin' Tales universe, it is clear that Hobbits are another type of hominid -- but not homo sapien, though this has been disputed by some of the Hobbitological community⁴

Premise 3 follows from premise 2: since Hobbits aren't human, and that anything that isn't a human is a subhuman then, the conclusion (Hobbits are subhuman) is true.

² A point of contention among Hobbitological logicians. The self-identified “Hobbit Rights” logicians hold that just because something is not a human, that it does not automatically mean that it is subhuman. This opens up different hypothesis' about Hobbit's taxonomic classification, and their status compared to homo sapiens; but tells us nothing new about the verity of Hobbit's existence.

Peter Jackson's Suicide

Peter Jackson, being a pseudo-Hobbitologist, insisted that Hobbits are real, but his ideas have since been discredited by leading Hobbitologists⁵. You may remember that his alleged 'archeological research' was in fact done on an ancient Babylonian waste dump — not Middle Earth as Jackson so claimed⁶.

The field of Hobbitology began to rapidly progress after Jackson's suicide in the Mojave Desert. Luckily for Hobbit scholars, a suicide note was found. Here is an excerpt⁷:

"Oh, the years I have wasted on my farce called Hobbit! I've lowered the standards of humanity and culture forever with the Hobbin' Tales! The thousands of dollars I made on the Lord of the Rings movies cannot now save me from my wretched legacy & eternal humiliation!"

Hobbitological Theology

Some Hobbit theologians take Gary Busey's video on Hobbitism as a matter of fact & faith. In this video, Gary illustrates fantastical & fascinating tales about the supernatural nature of Hobbit. For example:

"...those Hobbits like to use cockroaches for games. They like to make necklaces out of them. They like to use cockroaches as hairpieces — dead in their head — that way they feel like they're giving to nature...Hobbits are special. They can see and hear things we can't hear. Because Middle Earth has a different kind of electronic spiritual and mental and emotional energy going through it! So the Hobbits got one up on us on that...."⁸

If you people out there have had past life regressions, and you feel like you may have been a Hobbit in a past life —let me know it! And we'll speak about Hobbitism."

Here is a widely accepted theological argument for the existence of Hobbit⁹:

1. Hobbit is real
1. Hobbits are special
2. They can hear and see things we can't
3. Therefore, Hobbit is real

Hobbit Anatomy

Hobbit feet are utterly revolting as well as amazingly beautiful¹⁰. They have hand-feet similar to primates. However, unlike primates, Hobbit feet are entirely covered in hair.¹¹

However, the leading Hobbit biologists only have Jackson's discredited archaeological research to go by; i.e., they study preserved samples of alleged hands & feet of so-called 'Hobbits', which Peter Jackson kept in a moldy box in his basement¹², and were only discovered after his suicide in the Mojave Desert in 2005¹³.

The problem however, is that these Hobbit biologists refuse to provide their samples to other biologists wanting to conduct their own studies to verify the authenticity of their claims¹⁴.

There are several lawsuits¹⁵ pending regarding possession of the alleged Hobbit remains for research purposes. Several have been dismissed by higher courts, on the grounds "Hobbit isn't real"¹⁶. As you would expect, many in the legal profession adhere to traditional Hobbitologist logic.

Diet

A Hobbit's diet allegedly consists almost entirely of boiled pig-flesh (called swiffle)¹⁷ and mashed grapes. However, during the larvae stage¹⁸, they will occasionally supplement their diet with tea made from eucalyptus leaves¹⁹ boiled²⁰ in London Dry Gin²¹. Other than this tea (known as yookalgye), Hobbits were not known to consume any other beverages. This perhaps may account for their bizarre, and often foolish behavior; which sometimes described as “stupido cazzo pezzi di merda!”²² by Italian readers of *Hobbin' Tales*²³.

As mentioned in *An Introduction to Hobbitology*²⁴, Hobbits have been said to partake in the so-called “pipe-weed”²⁵. This is also suspected to result in their often foolish behavior. Furthermore, some Hobbitologists have claimed to have found “pipe weed” resin in wooden pipes in what is believed to be “Middle Earth”²⁶.

There is much debate at what is commonly called “second breakfast” in The Hobbin' Tales series. Speculation centers on the eating habits of Jackson himself. In fact, “second breakfast” was Jackson’s term²⁷ for his second round of binge drinking gin. The “breakfast” part of “second breakfast”, was that Jackson would crumble up bits of toast into his gin to “aid in absorption” (Jackson’s words). It is estimated that of the dozens of people who have claimed to have read all of the Hobbin' Tales, 53% became chronic gin drinkers²⁸. It was found that those who engaged in “second breakfast” more than 5 times a week had a 10,000% increase in mortality rate compared to non-Hobbin Tales readers.

¹⁸ See The People's Biology of Hobbits. 2001. p. 189. Cisneros, Frank & Higgins, Cathleine

¹⁹ Oddly enough, eucalyptus leaves were among the the samples collected in Jackson’s moldy boxes. It may have been possible that he had come up with this idea when writing A Hobbin' Tales Cookbook, and later purchased some eucalyptus leaves from a Big Lots in Hesperia, California, in an effort to legitimize his falsified research.

²⁰The boiling point of ethanol or grain alcohol (C₂H₅OH) at atmospheric pressure (14.7 psia, 1 bar absolute) is 173.1 F (78.37 C). However, since the Shire’s atmospheric pressure hovers around 101.6 psia, the temperatures needed to boil off the alcohol in the gin could not have possibly been reached — which implies that yookalgye likely contained a high percentage of ethyl alcohol.

²¹ Curiously enough, this was Jackson’s beverage of choice. He reportedly drank up to 5 litres before “second breakfast”, as he called it.

²⁶ According to most Hobbitologists, Middle Earth doesn’t exist. This is because to Hobbit logicians, “Hobbit isn’t real” is the conclusion of their axiomatic logic.

Sexuality

“You know that those Hobbits are coming from somewhere — from birth. You can’t tell the girls from the boys — which must making it exciting for them! You have to check for their male or female apparatus, and see what it says: girl or boy”²⁹

-Dr. Gary Busey

All of what is known about Hobbit sexuality comes from Jackson himself, in a chapter in the Hobbin’ Tales book named “The Shire Hole”. The chapter tells of a Hobbit named Ori (a virgin) in his quest to ‘penetrate’, as it were, the secret location of the Hobbit Brothel; or as it was called — the Shire Hole³⁰. Ori soon locates the brothel, which is hidden in a secret Hobbit-hole near the Shire’s waste dump. What he found inside were a dozen or so deliciously voluptuous Hobbits; Hobbits which he suspected ranged from nearabouts ten to fifty eight “Hobbit years”³¹ of age. Naturally, Ori had a fetish for the older Hobbit women. When he chose one to fuck, they went up to the prostitute’s room. You may recall that in Introduction to Hobbitology, that Ori’s Ring was coveted because of its masturbatory enhancement properties. It was also said to glow red when near Hobbit Brothels within a 5,000 kilometer radius. His prostitute, named Hairy’etta, soon learned that Ori possessed the auspicious ring. She planned on stealing it, in order to use on her clientele, which would surely turn her into the most popular Whore in all the Shire. So while Ori was undoing his faeces covered trousers, Hairy’etta noticed the ring dangling from his neck on a chain. Just when Ori’s “apparatus”³² was being liberated from his disgusting trousers, Hairy’etta ripped the necklace from his neck, breaking it, and retrieving the ring for herself. Ori was nonplussed; that is, he just wanted to stick his apparatus into a Hobbit Whore at least once in his life. In fact, he had saved up for 5 years at his landscaping job just to be able to afford the most worthless & wretched prostitute the Shire had to offer.

She then spit in Ori’s face, causing him to ejaculate furiously — and off an away she went with her Ring, to foreign landes, it is said...

Pets

Despite outcry from Hobbit Rights activists³³, Peter Jackson is said to have kept several “Hobbits” (Jackson’s words) in his cellar³⁴. He insisted that these were his “pets”, but Hobbit Rights activists have claimed that Jackson’s Hobbits were functionally used as slaves; most often used to conduct repairs on Jacksons’ domicile — his “Shire Hole”, as he called it, and to prepare him his second breakfast, daily. According to Hobbit logicians, who hold “Hobbit isn’t real”, claim that Jackson did not keep actual Hobbits, but rather, small children he adopted through the foster care system³⁵. He was said to have dressed them³⁶ as “disgusting, foul, and depraved creatures”³⁷, and told his neighbors and guests that they were in fact, Hobbits, and that he kept them as “pets”.

§

Conclusion

Hobbit isn’t real.

³⁴ According to certain neighbors of Jackson

³⁵ Jackson’s neighbors have since claimed they have not seen his “Hobbits” in the months following Jackson’s suicide.

³⁶ Several faeces smeared cloaks were found in Jackson’s basement, which has led to speculation that these were in fact the clothes of his alleged “Hobbits”.
